

EAT+DRINK

Northwest Dining Destinations

By Julie Arnan | May 26, 2017

Buckle up, and strap on your bib. It's time to explore the Pacific Northwest, taste buds first. Even if you're a recent transplant to the upper left, no doubt you've already discovered what a mouth-watering place it is to call home. Take a ride with us to some of the region's top dining destinations — from places in small towns, to big cities, to solitary hidden gems. We give you permission to plan an entire road trip dedicated to the pursuit of foodie bliss-dom.

PUGET SOUND: PENINSULA & ISLANDS

A spa, wooded trails, a manicured lawn opening up to the shimmering waters of Hood Canal, and freshly harvested shore-to-table seafood make for the perfect weekend getaway at Alderbrook Resort. Chef Josh Delgado (formerly at Barking Frog in Woodinville) utilizes local seafood and property-grown items like mushrooms, maple buds, berries, and greens to produce a menu designed around “place.”

Oysters at Alderbrook Resort. Photo courtesy Alderbrook Resort and Spa

<http://425magazine.com/northwest-dining-destinations/>